My dear Sir: No doubt you have forgotten the little print who talked with you at the Museum in n. Grand St. Ave.

But now that he returns, literally. You will remember that he promised to send you a discolored specimen of early American printing from the Franklin Press. It is a print of the history of Quakerism:

I have ever had an abiding love for Quakers.
The world would be so much better today if we had more of them. But, at least, is not Catholicism of importance, is it?

Very grateful but unable

Yours very respectfully

Right Reverend James E. Cassidy, Diocese of Fall River,
Vicar General's Office,
Fall River, Mass.

Right Reverend Cassidy:

Your letter as well as the early Newport book on Quakers came to hand the other day and I beg to thank you both for your kindness and courtesy in giving me this. I really did nothing for you to deserve it. Nevertheless, I am very glad to get it.

I was much interested in noticing that it was once the property of James Coggeshall. The Coggeshalls are in my wife's family tree and the James Coggeshall in the book is undoubtedly a brother of my wife's grandfather, who lived in Newport and later in Providence at about that time.

Very sincerely yours,

Curator
